Tilden denies the newspaper report that both he and his son, Charles, have sold their holdings in the possession of a letter of ex-Secretary Boutwell to Henry Clews which affords grounds for the impeachment of President Grant. The Local Paper.

A late number of the San Francisco Chronicle has a truthful and sensible article on the value of newspapers to the locality in which they are published—which is worthy of perusal by the residents of every town and village on the Pacific coast. The local journal is in truth the representative at large of its locality. The reader intuitively and almost without a consciousness that he is doing so, forms a notion of the size of a place and its business activity from a glance at the columns of its local journal. Nothing so thoroughly pictures the dullness, enterprise, prosperity or decline of a town as the columns of its papers. There may not be a word said of a decline in business and a depreciation in the value of property, but the fact is as apparent to the reader as if printed in four line pica at the head of every column. If the paper is published in a thriving place with a promising future the well filled advertising columns and the cheery confident tone of the articles; the clearly defined business competition and the lively and varied locals, impress the reader, though a thousand miles away, with as complete a statement of the facts as if he were present seeing with his own eyes and hearing with his own ears. The local newspaper is a power to induce people to visit or avoid a place. Some years ago a stranger in San Francisco was seeking information relative to interior towns in some one of which he proposed to locate. Visalia was suggested and he said "let me see a newspaper published there and I will decide." A copy of one of Visalia's papers was handed to him and after running his eyes over its advertising columns, he said that it is a thriving town and I will visit it. He is now a prominent citizen of Tulare county, and his influence has brought hundreds of people and thousands of dollars to the locality he selected as his home through the favorable report gleaned from the advertising columns of its newspaper.

Two Rotten Monopolies.

Gradually that old and odious monopoly—the Associated Press—has declined in power and influence until its final dissolution seems to be an event of the near future. Ostensibly a new association, it lent its power to the advancement of political schemes and for the maligning and injury of individuals and corporations. It made especial effort at mistating the affairs of the Central Pacific Railroad Company; it sent broadcast over the land the blackest of falsehoods relative to financial affairs in San Francisco and there was a time when no matter how an election went only Republican victories were reported. The Western Union Telegraph Company sold itself to this maligning and malignant monopoly and until the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company made the connection between San Francisco and the East, forced the people to pay two prices for the journals, the contemptible association and more than contemptible telegraph company, supplied with reports. Retribution is at hand. The venaal co-partnership of two venaal associations is about to dissolve by the force of its own rottenness. No journal now patronizes the Association Press if its locality is reached by the Atlantic and Pacific lines and in such detestation is the Western Union Telegraph Company held by the public that its business dwindles to nothing whenever compelled to compete with the Atlantic and Pacific company. With the admonition that no reliance need be placed in Simonton's letter we reprint the following:

CHICAGO, March 13. A special to the Times from New York says that at the last meeting of the Executive Committee of the Associated Press, Jas. W. Simonton, the General Agent, resigned his position. It appears that a resolution was introduced and passed agreeing to supply Mr. De Young, of the San Francisco Chronicle, with associated press news and at the same time appointing him agent of the association in San Francisco. The agent of the association in that city has hitherto been an employee of Mr. Simonton on one of his two papers. The appointment of Mr. De Young, it is stated, was considered by Mr. Simonton to be a personal insult. Since his resignation it is understood that the two papers will be supplied with news by the American Press Association.

hind it from Alta to Emigrant Gap, a distance of fifteen miles. The local receipts of the road for February and eleven days of March foot up $7,577, while the cost of running the road for the same length of time was $53,785—a dead loss of $46,210. These are interesting figures for those who maintain that it costs nothing to build railroads and nothing should be paid to ship and ride over them.

The Central Pacific managers recently distributed a dividend among their dependent organs. It consisted of old newspaper material, which came into their possession when the Sacramento Union was merged with their chief organ at the capital, the Sacramento Record. An old drum cylinder Hoe press fell to the lot of the Herald, having charge of the public opinion of Los Angeles.

A gentleman informs us that one of the editors of the Express says that the allusion above to a Los Angeles paper was meant for the Herald. It is true that the Herald strives to be, and we believe is generally regarded as the exponent of public opinion in Los Angeles. But a due respect for truth impels us to say that if the "Central Pacific managers" have been making a dividend "among their dependent organs," the Herald cannot be classed in the list, as it has received none of the "div." Further than this, the Herald office contains neither "an old drum cylinder Hoe press," nor a young drum cylinder Hoe press, nor a drum cylinder Hoe press of any age.

The Herald presses belong to the Herald Publishing Company, and the "Central Pacific managers" do not and never did own one of its presses, or an interest in one. Having set our meddlesome and falsifying contemporary right, we will now ask it a question or two: For how many Santa Monica lots did you sell yourself to Jones & Co., and did you not know you were defrauding the depositors of TEMPLE & WORKMAN when you borrowed money from the bank which you perhaps never intended and certainly well knew you could never repay?

There can be daily seen on our streets an individual, whose name is unknown to us, who is afflicted with a disease of some sort, in comparison with which the leprosy of biblical fame is refined purity. His face and neck are literally a mass of running sores. He seems to wander about doing nothing, looking into offices, standing in doorways, etc., where he is necessarily brought in immediate contact with hundreds of people daily. He handles door knobs with his hands, reeking with filth from his sores. While he is to be pitied, the preservation of our health demands that this unfortunate individual be taken care of. His may not be a contagious disease, still we are of the opinion that if any one were to get a particle of virus from his continually discharging sores into the slightest fresh wound, inoculation would be perfect. We understand that this man has a guardian appointed by the courts to care for him. If so the full penalty of the law should be visited upon him for neglect. Our city authorities are surely not powerless in this matter, and decency alone should urge them to take some action to remove this dangerous filth from the streets.

The Attorney General has been in conference with the Judiciary Committee this forenoon regarding the matter.

The Northern railroads are again reported clear of snow and no further trouble is apprehended. To-morrow we expect a double letter mail with papers &c. from the East. Cincinnati Excited.
CINCINNATI, OHIO, March 18th.—A great excitement was created here last evening by the Star's Washington special alleging that a rumor was current, explaining Pendleton's method of rewarding Mrs. Belknap for her interest in pushing the Kentucky Central claim. The dispatch said Mrs. Belknap had a claim of $30,000 against the bankrupt firm of E. Y. Leonard & Co., of which her first husband was a partner; that Pendleton as attorney could make nothing from it in pushing the Kentucky Central claim. He agreed to collect her claim against Leonard & Co. if his railroad claim against the Government should go through. The dispatch alleged that both claims were collected. Mr. Leonard, in an interview, admits that his firm was indebted to Mrs. Belknap as alleged, and says that nearly the full amount of the indebtedness has been paid her, but denies that her attorney, Pendleton, in any way influenced such payment.
